2. How it is ruining this generation’s focus span
3. Our Solution
4. App Introduction
5. Story Board
6. App Details
7. Q&A

Short-Form Contents have become a problem

- Social Media is engineered for infinite scroll
- Platforms optimize for engagement over user well being
- Dead Time gets automatically filled with passive consumption

How is it Destroying Focus Span?

- Dopamine gets easily rewarded with short videos
- Constant context switching trains the brain to expect novelty
- People want to be productive in those moments but DEFAULT to scrolling because there is no frictionless alternative

Our Solution

Insight

- Idle pockets of time already exists throughout everyone’s day

Reframe

- Instead of eliminating phone use, redirect it toward intentional microactions

“Task-Momma turns your spare 5 minutes into a small win”

App Introduction

App Introduction

- Set your time → Get a random task → Perform the task → Set a streak

How is it different from habit building apps?

- Interactive
- More than sending notifications

User Stories

- As a student, I want a feature that chooses a task for me so that I can be productive in between classes.
- As a student, I want to be able to create my own sets of tasks so that I can adhere to my personal goals.
- As a teacher, I want a feature that allows me to organize learning activities for my students so that my class does not fall behind on the curriculum schedule.
- As a manager, I want a feature that allows me to time tasks in order to make sure my team can complete all side tasks before the shift ends.
- As an adult, I want a feature that motivates me to complete tasks so that I have incentive to complete my tasks.
- As an adult, I want a feature that chooses a task for me so that I don’t have to spend time deciding what to do when I have extra time.
- As a user, I want to be able to customize my tasks and app settings in order to have better experience and accessibility.
- As a parent, I want my kids to stop spending time on their social media apps, so that I can have time to talk with them.
- As a teacher in middle school, I want students to have more human interaction around them so that they can learn how to be social outside of online environments.
